Poem of the Day - Family Friend Poems
One day the patterned carpet, the folding chairs, the woman in the blue suit by the door examining her split ends, all of it will go on without me. I'll have disappeared, as easily as a coin under lake water, and few to notice the difference. —a coin dropping into the darkening—, and West 4th Street, the sesame noodles that taste like too much peanut butter.

Poem of the Day "One Day" | English Department
One light, waking up rooftops, under each one, a story told by our silent gestures moving across windows. My face, your face, millions of faces in morning's mirrors, each one yawning to life, crescendoing into our day: pencil-yellow school buses, the rhythm of traffic lights, fruit stands: apples, limes, and oranges arrayed like rainbows

One Today Poem by Richard Blanco - Poem Hunter
The poem, "One More Day," summed up how I have felt since my mom died. I have carried a lot of guilt for not listening to her and soaking up her love. I lost her when I was 16 and wasn't given the chance to see her as just a woman trying her best. I'm now 47 and after a lot of avoidance am finally really dealing with the pain.

Mother Was A Best Friend, One More Day, Mother Death Poem
More and more I find myself hiding the way I feel for you. You are a desire.... A desire that I want to be fulfilled, yet glowing and aight, A desire that I want to burn in my heart each night. You are a dream.... A dream that entered my heart without any warning, A dream that I want to wake up with each morning.
